

AIDS IS STILL A CRISIS

15 million people
with HIV still can't get life-saving treatment

That's nearly the entire population of the Netherlands

Incredible progress against HIV/AIDS has created a false sense of security about an epidemic that still claims over 2,500 lives every day. Extraordinary medical advancements have overshadowed the cruel reality that an HIV diagnosis is still a death sentence for people who can't get treatment. The world may finally be inching past the halfway point in the global fight against AIDS, but with the population of young people most vulnerable to HIV growing rapidly, a status quo response could mean surrendering the whole fight.

THE EPIDEMIC IS GROWING BY THE MINUTE

(per minute)

DEATHS

Nearly 2 people die every minute from AIDS.²
(THAT'S ALMOST 1 MILLION AIDS-RELATED DEATHS LAST YEAR)

INFECTIONS

3 people are infected with HIV every minute.³
(THAT'S 1.8 MILLION PEOPLE GLOBALLY LAST YEAR)

VULNERABLE POPULATIONS ARE STILL BEING MISSED

GIRLS MAKE UP 75% OF NEW INFECTIONS

among teens 10-19 in sub-Saharan Africa⁵

AIDS IS THE NUMBER 1 CAUSE OF DEATH

among women aged 15-49 globally.⁶

ONLY HALF OF CHILDREN WITH HIV ARE

getting life-saving treatment.⁷

180,000 BABIES

inherited or aquired HIV from their mother last year.⁸

THE GLOBAL FIGHT RISKS FALLING BEHIND

The world is investing 20% less than what's needed to end the epidemic by 2030.¹⁰
