

CALIFORNIANS WANT U.S. INVESTMENT AGAINST GLOBAL DISEASE

Recent polling indicates that Californians across party lines support US investments to combat disease overseas.

69% of Californians agree that the US government should invest in preventing and treating diseases in other countries to reduce the risk of future outbreaks in the United States [compared to only 12% who disagree, and 19% of neither view].

Support is even stronger for programs with the goal of ending the HIV/AIDS epidemic, with 74% of Californians supporting US funding [compared to 9% opposed and 16% with neither view].

The summer 2025 nationwide poll by Stack Data Strategy and the ONE Campaign indicates that support cuts across party lines, including among those who identify as Republican or conservative.

Global Health Investments Support California Jobs. Furthermore, most of the small minority who expressed opposition said they would be more likely to support if they knew such funding would be used to buy medicines and equipment from American companies, which does in fact happen.

- Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance, is the single largest purchaser of US-made vaccines. Gavi spends more in the US than the US contributes to Gavi -- buying American-made materials and technologies that support livelihoods across the country.
- US support to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria also generates US returns, given the Global Fund's procurement from American businesses, including $580 million spent in California since 2010.

Review the polling results

Global Fund investment in the US

